Your Choice of Wood Building Products Makes a Difference

The green building movement has gone mainstream and continues to expand throughout the United States and worldwide. The resulting emphasis on green construction products and sustainable wood has propelled market demand for FSC-certified timber. FSC-certified wood is universally recognized as the standard for green building wood products.

The U.S. Green Building Council's (USGBC) Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) program is one of the most visible and important motivators of the green building movement and use of certified sustainable products. Architects and contractors seeking LEED credit for using FSC wood are often unfamiliar with certified sources. Even experienced development teams with firm commitments to source FSC-certified products face steep learning curves to procure wood products that suit their building needs.

To facilitate access to FSC suppliers for LEED and all green building, Rainforest Alliance compiled and introduced the SmartGuide, a listing of FSC-certified suppliers, with contact and product information, arranged according to product type. These suppliers are FSC-certified by Rainforest Alliance's SmartWood program or other accredited certifiers to provide the building materials listed on the right.

The list is growing quickly, so periodically check for source and information updates on our website, www.rainforest-alliance.org/greenbuilding; where you can access or download the guide directly. The SmartGuide includes information that was available at the time of publication, compiled from a number of sources including FSC (www.fsc-info.org/english/dbcoce.asp), SmartWood (www.brandsystems.net/smartwood) and Metafore (www.metafore.org/?s=147) databases, individual source interviews and company websites.

For additions or updates to the Rainforest Alliance's SmartGuide, or for questions about them, please contact Rick Hilton at rhilton@ra.org.

Why Buy Certified Products?

Third-party certification by Rainforest Alliance's SmartWood program provides independent assurance to consumers that the products they purchase meet the standards of the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) which are widely regarded as the most rigorous anywhere. Products bearing the FSC/SmartWood seal are guaranteed to come from forest lands sustainably managed to conserve biodiversity and support local economies. To learn why using FSC-certified products makes a difference, see Rainforest Alliance's Global Impacts paper on the environmental, social and economic impacts of certified products at www.rainforestalliance.org/programs/forestry/perspectives/documents/sw_impacts.pdf.

The Forest Stewardship Council

The Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) was founded by a diverse group of industry and environmental stakeholders, including the Rainforest Alliance, to develop a consistent, comprehensive and reliable set of third-party certification standards, and to ensure that they are universally recognized. FSC certification, whether of large forest management companies, small non-industrial landowners, indigenous landholders, community operations or public lands, is carried out by SmartWood's global network of regional offices and partners, as well as other certifiers.

The Rainforest Alliance Can Help

With field offices around the world and clients in more than 50 countries, the Rainforest Alliance can provide information and resources to help you develop realistic, cost-effective sourcing strategies and procedures for securing a reliable supply of certified wood and construction products. For the North American market we provide up to date listings of wood and building product sources through our website. In depth supply chain reviews or detailed sourcing assistance can be obtained through our SmartSource Program. We also provide guidance on purchasing policies that support sustainable land use practices. To talk with us about our sourcing services please visit our website at www.rainforest-alliance.org/programs/forestry/trees/services/smartsource.html or contact Daphne Hewitt at dhewitt@ra.org.

About Rainforest Alliance and its Forestry Programs

Headquartered in New York with offices around the world, the Rainforest Alliance works hand-in-hand with land owners and operators in the forestry, agricultural and tourism sectors to make their practices environmentally and socially responsible. SmartWood is the forestry certification arm of the Rainforest Alliance and is accredited by the FSC, an international body that establishes certification standards, and accredits and monitors certifiers.

SmartWood works with land owners and managers in more than 50 countries to ensure that wood and the resulting building products come from well-managed forests where wildlife and wildlands are protected, and workers and neighboring communities are treated with respect.

The TREES program provides market linkage services to companies and forestry communities as well as training and technical assistance to indigenous and community forestry operations to increase access to and benefits from forest certification. For more information about Rainforest Alliance's TREES program and activities please visit www.rainforest-alliance.org/programs/forestry/trees/activities.
